By Sergeant Empey

—WITH—Empey
(Himself)

Supported by Lois Meredith

—AND—
James Morrison

A Marvelous Photoplay
of Empey's World Famous Book.

Sergeant Empey is already famous as a fighter, lecturer and author. He enlisted in the Royal Fusiliers of London in 1915, served for eighteen months in the first line trenches as machine gunner and bomber, and was honorably discharged after receiving seven wounds "going over the top" in raids against the Hun.

Returning to America, he wrote his war epic, "Over the Top" which to date has been read by some three million people, it is estimated. Immediately upon publication of his book, Empey commenced lecturing for patriotic causes. He recruited thousands of men, sold $1,011,000 worth of Liberty Bonds, raised $50,000 for "smoke" funds and then went into motion pictures to show through the Vitaphone production of "Over the Top" just what we are up against "over there."
